

Woven

A Holy Week Devotional

Woven

A Holy Week Devotional

Woven : A Holy Week Devotional

© Copyright 2020 The Bible Society in Northern Ireland.

Words and design by Andrew Dickson, The Bible Society in Northern Ireland.

The Bible Society in Northern Ireland

Bible House, 27 Howard Street, Belfast, BT1 6NB

Unless indicated, all Scripture references are taken from The Holy Bible, New International Version (Anglicised Edition). Copyright © 1979, 1984, 2011 by Biblica (formerly International Bible Society). All rights reserved.

All emphasis in Scripture quotations has been added by the author.

Photograph credits: Scott Webb; Joshua Fuller; Annie Spratt; Rafael Cerqueira; Eberhard Grossgasteiger; Duong Quoc; Jon Tyson; Wes Hicks; Carolyn V - all Unsplash (www.unsplash.com)

You are permitted and encouraged to reproduce and distribute this material in any format provided you do not alter the wording in any way and do not charge a fee. For web posting, a link to this document on our website (www.biblesocietyni.co.uk) is preferred.

Printed in the UK by instant.print.co.uk on FSC approved paper.

Contents

Preface

Palm Sunday

Matthew 21:2-9

Monday

Matthew 21:10-17

Tuesday

Matthew 26:36-39

Wednesday

Matthew 26:47-50

Thursday

Luke 23:13-21

Good Friday

Mark 15:33-37

Saturday

Matthew 27:57-61

Resurrection Sunday

John 20:1-10

About Bible Society NI

It was just before the Passover Festival.
Jesus knew that the hour had come for him to leave this world and go to the Father.
Having loved his own who were in the world,
he loved them to the end.

John 13:1

Preface

Holy Week: the greatest week in all of history. Eight days woven into the fabric of countless lives changed forever.

This most special and significant of weeks gives us the opportunity, again, to pause, ponder and journey through the final week of Jesus Christ's life. To enter into the story, placing ourselves in every scene. To remember his sacrifice for our sins on a Roman cross. To celebrate his victory over death as he burst forth from his tomb. To honour Jesus as the only Lord and Saviour who can and does restore what sin unravelled in Eden generations ago. To realise that God's story and our own personal stories are interwoven.

The remarkable events as told in such detail by the gospel writers mean as much now as they did to Christ's disciples and the early church 2,000 years ago as they lived out the reality of the awesome things they had seen. For we are as much a part of this story as the early forefathers of our faith.

Our God is the master weaver, working and rewriting our stories (as one who creates a beautiful tapestry) to fit in with his ultimate plans and purpose for our lives and the world.

The heart of Woven is to show, through these short readings taken from the United Bible Societies 'BIBLE 2020' project, and accompanying devotionals, how this extravagant love, amazing grace and death defeating victory is God's desire for our lives too.

Don't let this greatest of all weeks pass you by. Join with us in this journey from Palm Sunday to Easter Sunday.

Over these next eight days, slow down. Get away from distractions. Quiet your soul and wait patiently upon the Lord. Pray as you read his Word and meditate on the truths contained within these pages that our God would come and meet with you right where you are at.

We pray as you do so that he will freshly ground you in his love, and weave the breadth and length, height and depth of it throughout every fabric of your life.

Andrew Dickson
Community Partnerships Manager
The Bible Society in Northern Ireland

The Spirit of the Sovereign Lord is on me

Isaiah 61:4

Palm Sunday

Read Matthew 21:2-9

“As the time approached for him to be taken up to heaven, Jesus resolutely set out for Jerusalem.” (Luke 9:51)

The stage is set. The streets are lined; filled to bursting point with the throngs of Jewish people who have come to Jerusalem. They're in town to celebrate the Passover Festival; to remember God's dramatic and powerful intervention that brought their ancestors out of their Egyptian slavery (Exodus 12:31-42). It is an incredibly emotional time.

The atmosphere is charged, reaching fever pitch at what the assembled crowd see next.

Jesus, the one they have heard teach, seen do the miraculous, boldly claim to be the Messiah is entering town on the back of a donkey. The King has come. Peacefully, humbly, and in triumph.

The crowds are raucous. Together they cheer and shout, "Hosanna", as they bless his name by spreading their cloaks and palm branches on the road before him (v.8-9). They are adoring him, submitting to him and pleading with him to save them.

It is the most astonishing red carpet welcome the world has ever seen.

Yet despite all that is going on around him, Jesus' eyes are firmly fixed on the task that is before him. He knows what is coming (Luke 18:31-33). He knows that Jerusalem means his time to die has come (Luke 13:33). These final few days of his life are his resolute focus.

The events of Palm Sunday teach us that all that will come throughout the rest of the week: his betrayal, arrest, false trial and crucifixion is no accidental miscarriage of justice.

No, this was a plan. A plan that had been set in motion and borne out of love from the moment sin entered the world through the crunch of an apple (Genesis 3:6). A plan to show us that we have a God who does not stand idly by, but instead chooses to enter time and history in order to rewrite the broken story.

The time has come for Jesus to fulfill his mission. And he will do so willingly (John 10:18); with tears in his eyes (Luke 19:41).

As he enters Jerusalem on that donkey he is choosing to lay down his life for our sake, so that we would know the incredible love our God has for each and every one of us.

A majestic mountain range under a starry night sky with the Milky Way galaxy visible. The mountains are rugged and covered in snow, with the Milky Way galaxy arching across the dark blue and black sky above them. The scene is illuminated by a soft, ethereal light, possibly from the stars or a low moon, creating a sense of awe and grandeur.

LORD, our LORD, how majestic is your name
in all the earth

Psalm 8:1

Monday

Read Matthew 21:10-17

The tension is palpable. This isn't the first time Jerusalem has been a city on a knife edge, troubled to its very core. It is not the first time that Jesus is the main reason for such feelings either.

Like Herod, when he heard the news of the birth of the king of the Jews from the seeking Magi (Matthew 2:3); the religious leaders are once again stirred up and filled with fear and indignation at the sight of Jesus as he enters Jerusalem to the acclaim of the masses.

For too long he has been a thorn in their side. They are determined this prophet, who they fail to recognise, from humble Nazareth, will have his life snuffed out before he can take their power and prominence from them (Matthew 26:3-5).

But before they can set the wheels in motion on their plan, Jesus is on the move, headed for the temple. He enters, flipping over tables and tossing money to the floor without so much as even a sideways glance or a moments pause.

The King who arrived peacefully on a donkey just the day before is now acting with a holy authority as he drives the sellers out of the temple with the message echoing loud and clear in their ears, "My house will be a house of prayer, but you are making it a 'den of robbers'" (v.13). I'm sure Palm Sunday's crowds were stunned by what they were seeing.

But it's what Jesus does next that is even more stunning: a truly astounding and beautiful reflection of his Kingdom. He welcomes the blind, the lame and the children to his side, healing and assuring them of their place with him (v.14-15).

The proud, the profaners and those who have made worship all about themselves are cleared out (v.12). Swept away to make room for those who come humbly, just as they are with all their sin and self laid bare.

And there, as he did in those days so he does with us today. Our Saviour looks upon us and hears our cries, and he does not ignore them, instead meeting us with abundant grace.

Through his life and sacrifice Jesus instigates a beautiful exchange. Giving to us beauty instead of ashes, joy over mourning, praise over despair (Isaiah 61:3), as well as a new life, identity and inheritance in him, a hope for the ages, the assurance of his presence with us always and so much more.

A dramatic landscape featuring a large, brown, rocky mountain in the background. In the foreground, a small white and black lamb stands on a grassy slope. To the right, a small white church with a mossy roof and a steeple is visible. The sky is overcast with some mist or smoke rising from the mountain.

A man of suffering and familiar with pain

Isaiah 53:3

Tuesday

Read Matthew 26:36-39

Jesus is on a collision course with the ultimate destiny of his mission to seek and save the lost: the cross and tomb.

As we journey through Holy Week our Saviour makes the most of these final few days with his disciples and the crowds gathered around them.

He teaches on faith (Matthew 21:21). Pronounces judgment on the religious establishment (Matthew 23:1-7; 24-33). Prophecies about the destruction of Jerusalem (Matthew 24:1-28). And he speaks in parables, warning of his second coming and the final judgment (Matthew 25:31-46). It is powerful and personal.

Yet Jesus also makes time and space to retreat. He gets away to Bethany, that place made famous by Lazarus' resurrection (John 11:1-44), to prepare himself for the Passover Festival and everything else coming his way as the story takes a sombre turn.

The week ticks by in a whirlwind of example on 'how to love' as Jesus washes his disciples' feet (John 13:1-20); and in a last supper that Jesus himself will soon fulfil as his body is broken and his blood is shed in sacrifice for us, for our freedom (Luke 22:7-20).

It is here, as Jesus moves on from this upper room, that we find ourselves in the Garden of Gethsemane staring at our Saviour as he agonisingly wrestles over the cup with his name on it.

His struggle, as he prays three times for the cup to pass him by, is deeply human. We glimpse Jesus here facing the full range of emotions and experiences we too endure, and admitting to how overwhelming it all is (v.38). How comforting he knows what life can be like, what it is to be human.

Yet, where we might continue to pray until God provides another way, Jesus chooses to surrender (v.39). He trusts the plans of his Father, because he knows that the ultimate joy of the victory he will soon enjoy will be greater than the torment and anguish of the cross he is about to endure (Hebrews 12:2).

And so, strengthened by an angel, he stares the cross in the face; choosing again to set his sights on that hill in Jerusalem. Because he knows that soon, through all he will accomplish on that old rugged cross, he will unashamedly be calling all those who seek him and call upon his name, including us, his brothers and sisters (Hebrews 2:11).

Even my close friend has turned against me

Psalm 41:9

Wednesday

Read Matthew 26:47-50

"What are you willing to give me if I deliver him over to you?", asks Judas (Matthew 26:14).

It is the question that sets in motion the act that will soon ultimately come to define his life. As Jesus agonisingly wrestles with his Father, and disciples lie exhausted around him, Judas Iscariot is seeking his moment. He is watching and waiting, the action of his betrayal approaching.

As Judas enters the garden that night, surrounded by a large crowd armed with swords and clubs (v.47), it is easy to feel angry toward him.

Here is a man who was called by Jesus and filled with power and authority (Luke 9:1). A man who gave up everything to follow the Messiah (Luke 6:16). A man who, for three years walked every road with Jesus; hearing his finest teachings (Matthew 5-7) and witnessing incredible, wide-ranging miracles (Mark 6:30-34, Luke 7:11-17). A man who was sent out with the other eleven to do these same incredible things (Luke 9:2). A man trusted to manage their money (John 12:6).

Yet, despite all of this: here he is now choosing to turn his back on the one who is the hope of all the world.

We ask ourselves, why would he do it? Greed? Disillusionment that Jesus wasn't the Messiah he grew up expecting? Fear for his future?

Whatever the reason he had and whatever anger we may have toward him it is safe to say, when Judas betrayed Jesus, he made the biggest mistake any man has ever made.

We live and worship Jesus in a world that seeks to draw us away from him with many distractions. They appear satisfying in the moment but we soon quickly discover, as Judas did with his bag of silver, that they are not.

And here is where we find incredibly good news for us. Though Judas succumbed and fell to his own desires, we live in the light of a Father's mercy: a mercy that is freely available to us no matter or past or how grievous our sin. A mercy that exceeds judgment and gives us a starting place as we seek to remain rooted in Christ, guarding our hearts through the treasure of his Word.

He was led like a lamb to the slaughter

Isaiah 53:7

Thursday

Read Luke 23:13-21

Judas has acted, betraying and sealing Jesus' fate with a kiss. Amidst the darkness of the late night hour, soldiers and servants seize Jesus; their faces etched with triumphant smiles. As disciples scatter, Peter, filled with anger, pulls out a sword and swings it at those nearest Jesus. He claims an ear and feels the stinging rebuke of his Master (John 18:10-11.).

The leaders' show of force has worked. Jesus is finally in their hands. Having waited years for this moment they will not let him slip away as he has before.

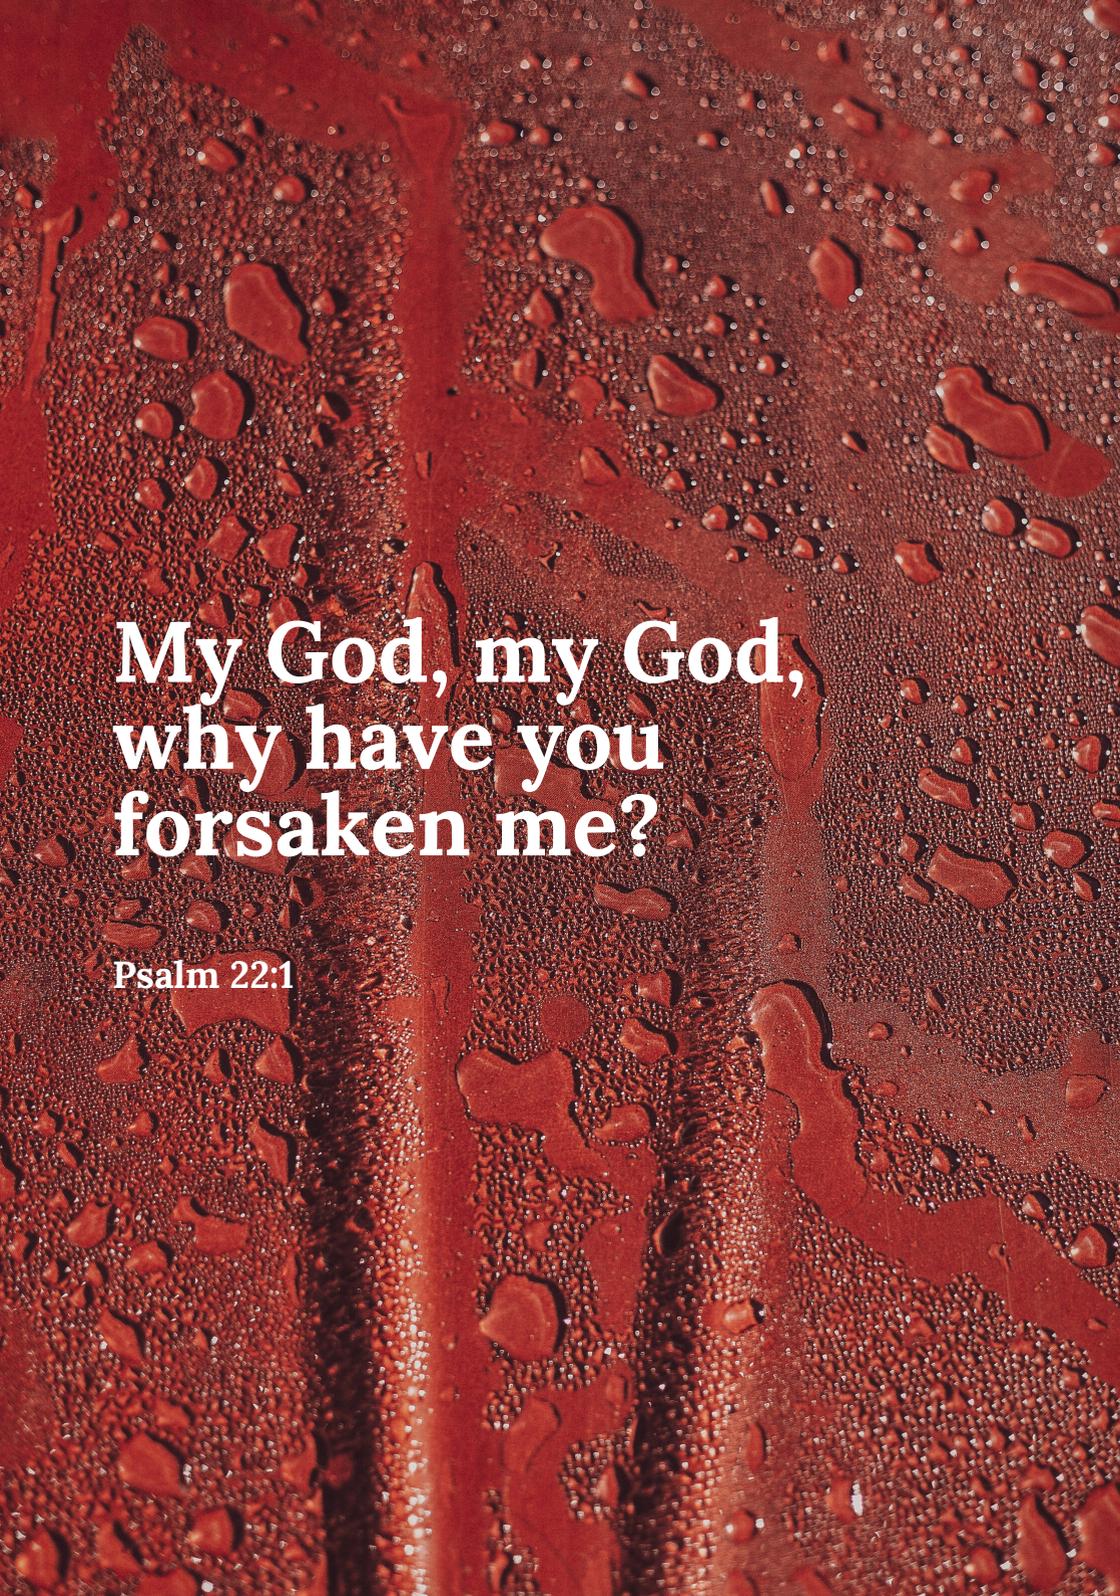

Firmly in their grasp, they brusquely lead Jesus back through the garden to the house of Annas, a former High Priest, to begin the first of six trials he will have.

The trials get quickly underway. They have to be carried out so as to ensure a damning verdict by daybreak. Passed on from a frustrated Annas to Caiaphas, the current High Priest, Jesus is declared guilty of blasphemy as he breaks his silence (Matthew 22:70). His face streaked with blood he is sentenced to death. But it's a sentence they cannot carry out; only Rome can. And so Jesus must have an audience with Pilate, the Roman governor of Judaea to decide his fate.

Yet Pilate finds no guilt in Jesus, nor Herod Antipas either (Luke 23:4-12). None of this serves to satisfy the religious council's deathly agenda as Jesus' sixth and final trial begins.

Pilate wants to punish and release Jesus as the Passover-pardoned prisoner, but the crowd want Barabbas released back to them instead (v.18). He tries another move, flogging and humiliating Jesus, but they want his body broken and blood shed on a cross because "he claimed to be the Son of God" (John 19:7). One more time Pilate weakly tries to release Jesus and one final time the leaders stand in his way: "If you let this man go, you are no friend of Caesar." (John 19:12). They have Pilate where they want him: cornered, he cannot argue.

And there we have it. Jesus, the only perfectly innocent one that can grant life to the supremely guilty is sentenced to die. Not out of Pilate's decision or the religious leaders scheming or even the crowds frenzied screaming, but ultimately out of Jesus' own authority and willingness to lay his life down for you and me. It was always his decision; this was always God's will. We are about to witness the most powerful demonstration of God's love in action.

My God, my God,
why have you
forsaken me?

Psalm 22:1

Good Friday

Read Mark 15:33-37

The longest night gives way to morning as Jesus, beaten beyond recognition and bleeding from head to toe, staggers physically strengthless under the weight of his own cross towards the crucifixion site at Golgotha (Mark 15:22).

Moments later Jesus, nails driven through his wrists and feet, is raised up on his cross. On one of the cruelest means of torture mankind has ever devised, the one labelled the King of the Jews (Mark 15:26) is in agony.

His crucifixion is a very public spectacle. The same crowd who had been whipped into a "crucify him" frenzy by the religious leaders merely minutes before have now gathered around Jesus to continue their mocking.

One of the thieves crucified alongside Jesus joins in with the crowd as they insult and mock him for his inability to save himself (Mark 15:27, 31). They do not realise that if this King saves himself their only hope for salvation is lost. The other thief, however, sees Jesus for who he really is and receives the gift of life when he asks the Messiah to remember him (Luke 23:42-43). Salvation is coming.

As the clock strikes midday the skies above the land turn dark (v.33). Jesus, the Son of God is embracing the full wrath of his Father so that we might taste eternal life. He has become sin for us (2 Corinthians 5:21), crying out in a loud voice of isolation, "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?" (v.34, Psalm 22:1). It is the single greatest display of love and surrendered obedience the world has ever and will ever see.

Shortly after, having drained the cup he prayed would pass him by, and having experienced the full curse of sin, Jesus wilfully gives up his life in three words that inextricably weave our past, present and future together and still echo into eternity to this day:

"It is finished" (John 19:30).

As Jesus commits his spirit into the hands of his Father and dies (Luke 23:46), the temple curtain is torn from top to bottom (Mark 15:38). What once separated us from God's holy presence is forever gone, overcome by grace. For on this, the darkest day in history, our Saviour has made a way back to the Father for all humanity as he restored on the cross the mess sin unravelled in the garden. "Surely this man was (and is) the Son of God!"

Salvation has come. Salvation is here!

By his wounds
you have been healed

1 Peter 2:24

Saturday

Read Matthew 27:57-61

Saturday. The Sabbath. Jesus Christ is buried, vanquished to death on a Roman cross by an outrageous series of betrayal, weak and jealous leadership, false trial, public mockery and, ultimately, the weight of all humanity's fallenness and sin.

As Joseph of Arimathea places the body of Jesus in his tomb, he seals its entrance with a big stone as appointed guards look on. We can, perhaps, imagine and feel the sense of finality of the situation.

There is no doubt, as Mary Magdalene and the other Mary look on, Jesus Christ is dead.

The deafening silence of a community deep in Sabbath rest and the stillness of the streets that hours before had been a chaotic cacophony of jeers, cheers and tears only compounds this truth.

Every memory and moment the remaining disciples had experienced in their three year apprenticeship with Jesus has been replaced with tears of anguish, the lament of broken dreams, a crushing weight of hopelessness, a crippling sense of fear and the question of "what next?" (Luke 24:21). We can, perhaps, imagine and feel the sense of finality of their situation.

In the rawness of the events of Good Friday and in the impatience of having to be still on the Sabbath, Sunday and all that Jesus ever spoke of regarding this idea of a three day temple rebuild (John. 2:19) and resurrection seems far off.

And yet today, on this most holy of days, God is in the story working something incredible as war is waged on both death and grave.

He is weaving something those first disciples could scarcely imagine but we can see on this day for ourselves. Out of all the tears and pain, lament, fear and hopelessness, we can, through the events of Good Friday, know and enjoy access to our Father in heaven.

As we wait on all that Sunday will bring (promises fulfilled, celebration untold and hope rebirthed) we can today also accept the incredible invitation offered to us to "draw near" (Hebrews 10:19-22) and have fellowship with our God. Because of Jesus, we no longer have to settle for God at a distance. Instead, we can know the near and present reality of the God of the universe in our lives when we direct our hearts to him. Finality gives way to opportunity. He is calling you to come and draw near.

It is for freedom that Christ has set us free!

Galatians 5:1

Resurrection Sunday

Read John 20:1-10

She runs. With every step panic and confusion accompany her, as do the devastating memories of the previous few days. As her eyes well up again, she replays in her mind the moment she watched Joseph bury Jesus and seal the tomb with a stone (Matthew 27:60-61).

Arriving back where the remaining disciples house themselves none of what she has witnessed in the very early morning light makes sense.

Breathlessly, Mary Magdalene shares her news. The tomb is empty, the body contained within it gone; where it is now she doesn't know (v.1-2).

Before questions can even be asked Peter and the other disciple are on the move, retracing Mary's route to the garden. The empty tomb greets them as they look in and see only sheets of linen where the body had been laid (v.6-7). What has happened? Where is Jesus?

Confusion reigns as the disciples remain clueless to the cataclysmic event that has taken place in the garden tomb on that morning. Jesus often spoke to them about what would take place (Matthew 17:22-23, Mark 8:31, Luke 9:22), but they never fully got it.

Yet it is here, in this garden amidst confusion, fear and devastation, that come the words that alter their story and ours forever. Words that weave heartbreak into joy:

"Don't be alarmed. You are looking for Jesus the Nazarene, who was crucified. He has risen! He is not here. See the place where they laid him." (Mark 16:6)

Christ is risen! Death is swallowed up in victory (1 Corinthians 15:54). The enemy is defeated. The darkness has given way to the Light. Sin is consumed by amazing grace. There is hope for all.

What we celebrate annually on this day is our dress rehearsal for that great and coming day when we will join the triumphant song of heaven's multitude proclaiming all glory and honour and worth to the victorious Lamb of God! This Resurrection Sunday is a little taste of the eternity that awaits.

So we press on, living in the knowledge of this. Knowing that the empty tomb exclaims to us Jesus is alive. A new age has begun. This life is not all there is. There is victory. There is joy. There is more. For all time.

Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed

John 20:29

About Bible Society NI

At Bible Society NI we really care about the Bible.

We are passionate about "Reaching everyone with God's Word", believing wholeheartedly that the Bible is a gift for people of all ages and in every place, no matter their gender, socio-economic background, life story or their learning ability.

As a Society our heart is for people here in Northern Ireland, and also overseas, to have the chance to access, engage and respond to the Word of God in a language and format they can understand. We do this so that they may be transformed as they encounter Jesus and discover his incredible purpose for their life.

To that end we are one of over 150 Bible Societies worldwide who form part of the United Bible Societies Global Fellowship.

As a local Society within this international community we raise both prayer and financial support for other Bible Societies around the world supporting:

- Bible Translation
- Bible Production
- Bible Distribution
- Bible Engagement
- Bible Literacy
- Bible Advocacy

Throughout each year we also support Bible projects here in Northern Ireland; working in partnership with churches and organisations to help people engage more with God's Word in their everyday lives.

To keep up to date or find out more, scan the QR code below to visit our website.

Reaching everyone with God's Word

The Bible Society in Northern Ireland
Bible House
27 Howard Street
Belfast
BT1 6NB

Tel: +44 (0) 28 9032 6577
Email: info@biblesocietyni.co.uk
Web: www.biblesocietyni.co.uk
Social Media: @biblesocietyni

Registered with the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland NIC102557

